

new plays for the nation's capital
for playwrights, for playmakers, for playgoers

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

September 21st, 2009

CONTACT:

Jessica Burgess

Phone: 202 256 9802

Email:

jburgess@inkwelltheatre.org

THE INKWELL PROUDLY PRESENTS
THE 2009 INKUBATOR FESTIVAL

September 24th through October 18th
at the H Street Playhouse

Washington, DC's resource for new play development showcases 18 raw new plays by America's most talented up-and-coming writers

The Inkwell — the three-year-old theatre company that focuses exclusively on new play development — is proud to announce the line-up for its second INKUBATOR FESTIVAL (September 24th through October 18th at the H Street Playhouse), an unprecedented exploration of playmaking in the nation's capital. The festival will showcase 18 new plays from the most exciting up-and-coming writers in America, allowing audiences to engage with playwrights, directors, actors, and dramaturges as they put these plays on their feet, in many cases for the first time.

"We chose these inventive and wildly theatrical plays from a pool of more than 400," says The Inkwell's Artistic Director Jessica Burgess. "These plays explore everything from race relations to body shape, immaculate conception to The Odyssey in the most imaginative of ways. We believe we have tapped into the next great generation of playwrights, and we are so proud to help them take the next step in their unfolding careers here in our nation's capital."

"I only wish I had had such a resource as The Inkwell in Washington, DC when I had first started out," says award-winning playwright Karen Zacarias, whose work is produced at major theatres in DC and throughout the U.S. "I was traveling all over the country to receive the support and encouragement that The Inkwell is providing to these emerging writers."

"Washington, DC needs a developmental center for new plays, a place where early-career playwrights can find support for their growth and

new plays for the nation's capital
for playwrights, for playmakers, for playgoers

experimentation,” says Jason Loewith, Executive Director of the National New Play Network. “The Inkwell’s ambition to be that center – like The Lark Play Development Company in New York or the Bay Area Playwrights Foundation in San Francisco – is a tremendous opportunity for our community’s artists.”

Audiences will have the chance to enjoy bite-sized excerpts of 13 plays at three SHOWCASE READINGS, each organized around a different theme. The first occurs September 27th at 3:00 p.m., featuring four local writers — Cameron McNary, Anne M. McCaw, Lisa M. Hodsell, and Q Terah Jackson — exploring everything from the politics of the Reformation to the collision of fantasy and family dynamics through Hip Hop. Following this SHOWCASE READING is a CONVENING OF LOCAL PLAYWRIGHTS, a facilitated discussion among writers based in the Washington, DC area to explore how The Inkwell can meet their needs and goals. Subsequent SHOWCASE READINGS are on October 3rd at 8:00 p.m. and October 17th at 3:00 p.m.

The Inkwell will also present three INKREADINGS, staged readings of the latest drafts of full-length plays coming out of a four-day intensive rehearsal process. Playwrights will be in town for rehearsals and readings. On September 26th at 8:00 p.m., The Inkwell presents the INKREADING of STRIKE/SEEK/FIND by Jason Gray Platt, a new take on The Odyssey that offers a chilling portrait of the family that the great warrior left behind. The Inkwell then offers CYGNUS by Susan Soon He Stanton for the second INKREADING on October 5th at 8:00 p.m. Stanton spins a dark fairy tale where a burnt feather may illuminate the possibility of immaculate conception. The final INKREADING will be of TETHER by Julie Taiwo Oni on October 10th at 3:00 p.m., an examination sisterhood, coming of age, and race, all played out around a tetherball pole.

The Inkwell ends the festival with an INKUBATOR PRODUCTION of Melissa Blackall’s THE F WORD, the culminating step in an 18-month development process with The Inkwell. A biting commentary on America’s obsession with FAT, the play follows various bodies through a series of vignettes as they struggle to find their perfect shape — physically, psychically, and spiritually. THE F WORD is directed by Jessica Lefkow, whose production of Honey Brown Eyes at Theatre J received the Charles McArthur Award for Outstanding New Play.

All festival events will be held at H Street Playhouse (www.hstreetplayhouse.com), 1365 H Street, NE, Washington, DC. All events are free, although we suggest a donation of $10. A full calendar of events can be found at The Inkwell’s website, www.inkwelltheatre.org.

new plays for the nation's capital
for playwrights, for playmakers, for playgoers

ABOUT THE INKWELL

Launched at the Page-to-Stage Festival at The Kennedy Center in September 2007, The Inkwell is the wellspring for new theatrical work in the nation's capital, serving as a vital resource for exploring and encouraging the process for making new plays. Through a wide range of programming for playwrights, playmakers, and playgoers, The Inkwell aims to:

- nurture a generation of playwrights who produce work with a unique rhythm and voice, that explodes viscerally and psychologically off the page, that creates impossible worlds and pushes the boundaries of theater as we know it;
- train the talented and dedicated corps of playmakers in the Washington, DC area to deeply and thoughtfully engage in the process of making new plays; and,
- create an infrastructure within the DC theater community that supports and encourages the development of new plays.

Thus, The Inkwell envisions a new phase in American Theater centered in our Nation's capital, where playwrights, playmakers, and playgoers here in Washington, DC are integral to the creation of the most innovative and thought-provoking plays in the country.

new plays for the nation's capital
for playwrights, for playmakers, for playgoers

2009 INKUBATOR FESTIVAL
18 plays in development
and a master class in dramaturgy

From full productions to staged readings and showcases, The Inkwell's second INKUBATOR FESTIVAL shines light on new work from across the country at different stages of development, from first draft to 20th.

Inkubator Festival 2009 at The H Street Playhouse
Calendar of Events
Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday	Sunday
9/21	9/22	9/23	9/24 8p Open Rehearsal: The F Word by Melissa Blackall	9/25	9/26 8p InkReading: strive/seek/find by Jason Gray Platt	9/27 3p Playwright Showcase: Local Playwrights
9/28	9/29	9/30 8p Open Rehearsal: The F Word by Melissa Blackall	10/1	10/2	10/3 11a Master Class: The Art of New Play Dramaturgy with Michael Bigelow Dixon 8p Playwright Showcase: By The Book	10/4 11:30a Master Class (cont.): The Art of New Play Dramaturgy with Michael Bigelow Dixon
10/5 8p InkReading: Cygnus by Susan Soon He Stanton	10/6 8p Open Rehearsal: The F Word by Melissa Blackall	10/7	10/8	10/9	10/10 3p InkReading: Tether by Julie Taiwo Oni	10/11
10/12	10/13 8p Inkubator Production: The F Word by Melissa Blackall	10/14 8p Inkubator Production: The F Word by Melissa Blackall	10/15 8p Inkubator Production: The F Word by Melissa Blackall	10/16 8p Inkubator Production: The F Word by Melissa Blackall	10/17 3p Playwright Showcase: Language on the Edge 8p Inkubator Production: The F Word by Melissa Blackall	10/18 2p Inkubator Production: The F Word by Melissa Blackall

new plays for the nation's capital
for playwrights, for playmakers, for playgoers

Open Rehearsals: The F Word by Melissa Blackall

September 24th, 30th and October 6th at 8 p.m.

The Inkwell pulls back the curtain to peek into the process of pulling a new play off the page and onto its feet. For those curious about how the rehearsal process works, the company of The F Word opens its doors to onlookers three times during its three-week rehearsal period. $10 suggested donation.

InkReading: strive/seek/find by Jason Gray Platt

September 26th at 8 p.m.

Jason Gray Platt, in his third year of Columbia University's playwriting MFA program, dips into The Odyssey to paint a chilling portrait of the family that the warrior leaves behind. Christopher Gallu directs this developmental workshop, culminating in a staged reading featuring Evan Casey as Telemachus, Lindsay Haynes as Calliope, Valerie Leonard as Penelope, and Nigel Reed as her many suitors. $10 suggested donation.

Playwright Showcase: Local Playwrights Convening

Featuring excerpts from Beggar at its Feet, 20Twenty, Of Dice and Men, and Erasmus

September 27th at 3 p.m.

The Inkwell gathers local playwrights to discuss how DC's new play development resource can better serve the needs and goals of the community. The event begins with a showcase of DC-area finalists from The Inkwell's national call for submissions – Anne M. McCaw, Q. Terah Jackson, Cameron McNary, and Lisa M. Hodsoll – followed by an open conversation about how The Inkwell can support DC-area playwrights. The discussion will continue at a raucous happy hour at The Argonaut. Free to attend showcase and discussion, with happy hour specials at The Argonaut.

Master Class: The Art of New Play Dramaturgy

October 3rd at 11 a.m. and October 4th at 11:30 a.m.

Dramaturg, teacher, and author Michael Bigelow Dixon leads an eight-hour master class on interpretation of innovative material, effective collaboration with playwrights, navigation of the rehearsal and revision process, and 14 ways to analyze a new play. Mr. Dixon has supervised and participated in the commissioning, development, and production of more than 800 new plays, including work by Tony Kushner, Regina Taylor, David Henry Hwang, Naomi Iizuka, Jose Rivera, Lynn Nottage, Charles Mee, and Jane Martin. Enrollment fee: $100. Reservations required: reservations@inkwelltheatre.org

new plays for the nation's capital
for playwrights, for playmakers, for playgoers

Playwright Showcase: By The Book

Featuring excerpts from Clementine and the Cyber Ducks, Genesis, The Missing Pieces, The Pillow Book, and The Owl Girl

October 3rd at 8 p.m.

The Inkwell whips up an evening of theatre tapas with bite-sized excerpts from five plays inspired by literature and history, selected from The Inkwell's national call for submissions. With inspiration from sources as diverse as the Bible, Playboy magazine, American folk songs, geisha, and the Gaza Strip, playwrights Krista Knight, Alexis Roblin, Nick Zagone, Anna Moench, and Monica Raymond create imaginative new worlds for the stage. Rorschach Theatre's Randy Baker will direct. $10 suggested donation.

InkReading: Cygnus by Susan Soon He Stanton

October 5th at 8 p.m.

Playwright Susan Soon He Stanton, a Hawaiian-born Yale University MFA candidate, spins a dark fairy tale about a young woman whose guardian angel rescues her from would-be rapists. In this developmental workshop culminating in a staged reading, directed by The Inkwell's artistic director Jessica Burgess, a burnt feather may illuminate the possibility of immaculate conception, and two broken feet might be a sign of the weight of sin. $10 suggested donation.

InkReading: Tether by Julie Taiwo Oni

October 10th at 3 p.m.

Julie Taiwo Oni, a recent recipient of an MFA in playwriting from University of Southern California, crafts a moving examination of sisterhood, coming of age, and race in America. Lach and Lam are 15 year-old twin girls, one black and the other white, who live their life on the tetherball court. Like all sisters, they squabble and make up; like all twins, they are each other's mirrors – and opposites. $10 suggested donation.

Playwright Showcase: Language on the Edge

Featuring excerpts from Monument, The Hairy Dutchman, Spake, Beautiful Province (Belle Provence), and Balls

October 17 at 3 p.m.

From Shakespeare to present, playwrights have radically reinvented language to help us examine the way in which we communicate. Snippets from linguistically innovative plays, selected from The Inkwell's national call for submissions, will showcase the surprising and delightful wordplay of playwrights Doug Dolcino, Andy Bragen, David L. Williams, Clarence Coe, and Jonathan Yukich. The Inkwell's Lee Liebeskind will direct. $10 suggested donation.

new plays for the nation's capital
for playwrights, for playmakers, for playgoers

Inkubator Production: The F Word by Melissa Blackall

October 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th at 8 p.m. and October 18th at 2 p.m.

The Inkwell presents Melissa Blackall's biting play about America's obsession with the dirtiest word in the English language: FAT. Blackall holds the mirror up to our body-obsessed culture with this ensemble-driven collage piece. After nearly three years of developmental collaboration, ranging from an Inkubator Reading process in 2008 to a showcase at the Kennedy Center's Page to Stage Festival, this Inkubator production of The F Word marks a culmination of The Inkwell's partnership with playwright Blackall. Director Jessica Lefkow, whose production of Honey Brown Eyes at Theatre J garnered the Charles McArthur Award for Outstanding New Play, leads this production of a political play-in-progress. The production features Jessica Lynn Rodriguez, Prairie Griffith, Karl Bittner, Jason McIntosh, Alice Gibson, Susan Holliday, and Mark Ludwick. The design team includes Matt Soule, Adam Magazine*, Maggie Clifton, Suzen Mason*, Matt Nielson, and Zachary Borovay. Choreography is provided by Melissa-Leigh Bustamante. $10 suggested donation. Reservations encouraged: reservations@inkwelltheatre.org

* A founding member of The Inkwell.